-i- FUNCTION: Regulator of cell fate decisions in multiple lineages. Specifically, functions as a determination factor that specifies sensory organ identity in precursor cells probably also involved in cell type specification of Malpighian tubules. In absence of cut gene external sensory organs are transformed into chordotonal

PCG and trXG proteins act by forming multiprotein complexes, which are respectively required to maintain the transcriptionally repressive and transcriptionally active state of homeotic genes throughout development. PCG and trXG protein complexes are not required to initiate repression and activation, but to maintain it during later stages of development. Both complexes probably act the methylation of histones, rendering chromatin heritably changed the stages of the complexes of the Colocalizes with many PCG sites on polytene chromosomes. It also associates with many unique sites on polytene chromosomes.

FISSUE SPECIFICITY: Highly expressed in nurse cells and deposited in occytes late in cogenesis. Ubiquitous in early embryos. Late embryos show higher levels in CNS and neurectoderm.

DEVELOPMENTAL STAGE: Expressed both maternally and zygotically. Early embryos have high levels of expression, this drops off and zygotic expression begins at 3-6 hour embryos. Expression levels are low in larvae and medium in pupae and adults.

DOMAIN: Contains two Leu-Xaa-Xaa-Leu-Leu (LXXLL) motifs, which may be required for an association with nuclear receptors (By similarity).

SIMILARITY: Belongs to the Asx family.

CAUTION: Ref. 1 sequence differs from that shown due to frameshifts in positions 608 and 719.
